PARENTAL RESTRICTIONS

Unified Shores Academy believes parents, not school districts, should shoulder the responsibility of directing the child's education. USA exists to support, not supplant, the parent in carrying out this responsibility. USA also recognizes that our families represent a wide spectrum of values, beliefs, and convictions. Therefore, USA avoids teaching controversial topics as much as possible. Parents are given the responsibility for teaching several of the controversial state standards at home, including evolution and family life education. However, materials are available through the school for parents to use at home and there may be optional classes offered concerning these subjects during the school year.

USA endeavors to inform parents prior to engaging in activities which may be controversial to some families. To this end, permission will be obtained before showing movies rated PG for "parental guidance" and information will be sent home prior to students participating in traditional celebrations.

Despite our best efforts to avoid controversial subjects and inform parents concerning our school activities, there may be additional restrictions which you as a parent would like to place upon your child as he/she enters our school. In order to better partner with you as a parent, we request that you make us aware of specific requests which will assist your child in feeling comfortable in our school and preserve his/her way of life. Feel free to talk with the USA teachers and administration concerning your educational perspective. Additionally, you may list below any family values, beliefs, or convictions of which you would like the teachers to be aware:
